

Welcome to VSVN x Wave Hill!

You will be watching artists share aspects of the artistic practice through a live video feed. As we all adjust to the changes and impacts of COVID 19, many artists in New York City no longer have access to their studio and are now working, teaching, and making art from home. In general, a studio is a place where artists make and share their art. Some artists have studios inside, some artists have studios outside and some artists use their computer as a virtual studio. But ultimately, a studio is a special place and can be any place where you feel creative.

Here are some things you can think about during each studio visit:

- What kind of materials does the artist use to make their art?
- Does the artist use these materials in a way that is familiar or unfamiliar?
- What inspires the artist?
- What is the artist's relationship to nature?
- Does the artist's life experience influence their work?

Other questions you might want to ask yourself:

- How do the themes in the artist's work relate to my own lived experiences?
- Do I see anything in the studios that I have seen somewhere else?
- Where do I feel creative?

Thank you for participating in VSVN x Wave Hill and we hope you enjoyed these visits.

For any questions or comments please email branchingout@wavehill.org.

